A Voice In The Dark #1 In Stores 11/20!

Can you hear that, Top Cow fans?

Sounds like there's A Voice In The Dark!

A Voice In The Dark, hitting shelves next week, is the all new ongoing series from Top Cow's black-and-white imprint, Minotaur Press. The book, written and drawn by mouth from disabled creator Larime Taylor, will debut with an oversized first issue – more bang for your buck! The series, which Terry Moore calls "Strangers in Paradise meets Dexter," follows the murderous tendencies and collegiate struggles of Zoey Aarons, a fledgling serial killer. Zoey's first kill was just after graduating high school, a bully who tortured her adopted sister. Enrolling in an elite California girls' college, Zoey starts an anonymous radio talk show called "A Voice in the Dark," hoping to help others and bring catharsis to her own homicidal desires. But with a detective for an uncle, her family far away back at home, and a set of roommates anyone would want to murder, can Zoey keep herself in check?
